

Steamships

From 1870 to 1941, steamships were a part of daily life at Robinhood (formerly North Georgetown and later Riggsville). These fascinating and elegant vessels were the most efficient method of transporting people and goods along the coast and connecting the near shore islands to the mainland.

Steamship Crew at Riggsville Wharf

Eastern Steamship Company Route

Riggsville was a regular daily stop for the Eastern Steamship Company's Boothbay Harbor division. This chart showing the route taken was generously donated by local historian, Gene Reynolds.

Waiting for the Steamship

The first steamship put into service for the Eastern Steamship Company (Boothbay Division) was the 86' "Sasanoa", captained by Gil Lowe of Lowe Point in Georgetown.